

We do not need cell phones on airplanes. We have screaming children, annoying seat neighbors and that little bell to clear the plane of silence. Do we really need a bunch of people screaming on their cell phones too? Is it really unreasonable to ask people to spend a few hours disconnected? It's probably good for their stress level. Maybe you should think of no cell phones on planes as a public health service.